

Sept. 28, 2004 - Scholar Baller Update

By Dave Heikkinen

September 28, 2004

Three NCAA football teams have now worn the Scholar-Baller recognition patches developed and produced by Dave Heikkinen in collaboration with the Scholar-Baller executive headed by Dr. C. Keith Harrison out of Tempe, Arizona. The first team members to wear the patches in NCAA Division 1 competition were from Arizona State University on September 2nd. This past weekend, qualifying team members at Hampton University and Morgan State University wore the patches in the annual New York Urban League Classic held at the Meadowlands Stadium in New Jersey. In fact, Head Coach Joe Taylor of Hampton University also proudly wore the patch on his game-day polo shirt. These patches are intended to proudly and publicly acknowledge the combined academic and athletic success of the student athletes and their coaches.
